LIFE IS A LOAN

Life is a loan to children of men
And a gift from Maker of men
He gives to all: to the good and the mean
If men know they owe their all
To Maker of men and Giver of all
Their vice and pride, they'll long have drowned
To seek His face for a fair reward
And not setting their traps for others to slide

Life is a path; a parcel; a journey
To some, it's fair and sweeter than honey
To some, it's callous, arduous, unfunny
But all are products of chances and choices
Buried in souls or uttered in voices
To make or mar their nature and future

When some oppress, suppress, repress
You think they own the air they breathe
And also control the blood in their veins
Caution, my brother, sister and friend
Life is a gift and loan from God
If you're in charge, how will yours end?

What you've done; are doing; will do
Are they impactful, progressive, destructive?
Will you repeat it if offered a chance?
Life is a theatre for acting the scripts
Penned already for men by God
How it's acted matters to the Maker
Dare to seek the good of others
Not their faults, losses and woes
For only then will your reward be fair

And you'll live in peace void of offence or fear
For life is a loan and a gift to men

Make yours matter and be remembered for good
